

Dr. Willging is currently Senior Associate at Johns Hopkins University's Bloomberg School of Public Health. His teaching and research interests are in the area of health care management, with an emphasis on long-term care. Dr. Willging is also a Trustee at the A. T. Still University of Health Sciences, where he is an Adjunct Professor in the University's School of Health Management.

Dr. Willging has served as President and Chief Executive Officer of the Assisted Living Federation of America, where he was responsible for managing the association as well as for representing the assisted living industry in the media, on Capitol Hill and before the executive branch of government. Previously, Dr. Willging was President and Chief Executive Officer of the American Health Care Association (AHCA), a long-term care trade association representing 12,000 non-profit and for-profit nursing facilities.

Dr. Willging has over thirty years of extensive experience in the health care field. Before joining the American Health Care Association, he was an officer at Blue Cross/Blue Shield of Greater New York and Deputy Administrator of the Health Care Financing Administration. He also served as Chairman of Howard County General Hospital, a 220-bed acute care facility in Maryland and now a part of Johns Hopkins Medicine.

Dr. Willging received his Ph.D. from Columbia University in the City of New York.

Paul Willging