Annual Developing Children Through All Ages Conference

The 2nd annual Developing Children Through All Ages Conference will be held September 19, 2015 at the Sheraton Columbia Town Center from 7:30AM to 4:00PM. This unique training and networking opportunity features the latest research on brain development and how it impacts our work with children. Knowledge is power and by educating ourselves about brain development, we can effectively build brain power in young children. All early education professionals and child care providers are invited to attend the Developing Children Through All Ages Conference!

Our day will begin with Ellen Abramson, certified presenter for The Upside Down Organization, presenting a dynamic general session entitled "Change Your Language, Change Their Lives." She will discuss how the specific language used by adults who teach, mentor, counsel, and parent children has a much more profound effect on their development than previously realized. Walk away with a new way of communicating with children that builds resilience, promotes intrinsic motivation, enhances cognitive stimulation and creates kaleidoscope thinkers.

Participants will then attend breakout sessions presented by local and regional professionals focused on brain development and how it impacts our work with children. Breakout sessions will cover a variety of topics all based upon brain research including: gender differences and the environment, learning activities, effective leadership strategies, and child guidance and communication.

Professional Development Planning Tips

As you are planning your professional development for the next year, keep in mind that the following new training regulations are scheduled to take effect between January and July 2016:

- Family child care providers will be required to take Medication Administration which is a 6 hour workshop and is currently being offered in our training calendar. If you have taken this class in the past, you do not have to repeat it. We are offering as many sessions of this workshop as we can to meet demand.
- All providers will have to complete two other trainings. The first training is “Including all Children and the Americans with Disabilities Act” (if you have taken this class in the past, you do not have to retake.) The second training is the developmental screenings overview entitled “On Track: All Aboard for Developmental Progress”. In addition, tool specific training will be available for programs once they have selected their developmental screening tool.
- Family child care providers and Infant/Toddler center staff will be required to complete a Breastfeeding Support Training. In addition to the training, this regulation also requires each program to provide a space for mothers to breastfeed or pump.

These workshops are all offered on a regular basis in our training calendar and are available as on-site trainings for 10 or more people. If you are interested in having an on-site training, contact Nikki Pierre at 410-313-1923 or npierre@howardcountymd.gov. If you need assistance in planning your professional development, contact Joan Johnson at 410-313-1432 or jmjohnson@howardcountymd.gov.

CARE Center Corner Brain Growth and Play

"Play is the work of a child."-Piaget

If you want to see children succeed in the classroom, our answer is to let them play. How can that be? Don't we want our children to excel academically across the board? Yes, we do. So let them play!

Children love to play and they especially love to pretend when they play. Pretend play is crucial in helping the brain develop executive functioning skills. These are skills that are necessary for academic success and success in the adult years. Executive functioning skills include the working memory, cognitive flexibility, inhibitory control and self-regulation or self-control.

Research shows that the developing brain needs play, especially pretend play, to form neurological connections which in turn enable children to make meaning of the world. In her book, "Mind In The Making: The Seven Essential Life Skills Every Child Needs" (2010), author Ellen Galinsky notes that children need to learn a lot of information. Children need to learn facts, figures, concepts, and insights, but Galinsky emphasizes that children also need life skills. Life skills include the executive functions which are so powerfully developed through pretend play.

In a preschool or kindergarten setting, children should be provided with play-based activities for extended periods throughout the day. Children need to explore, touch, question, and interact. They need to be curious and learn by doing. Allowing children to have sustained unstructured play is essential for a child's development and academic success.

So go ahead....have fun and play!
